

What is Claimed:

1. A method of using content analysis techniques to extract information from on-line news feeds and other on-line media and then using the information so extracted to predict changes in stock prices or volatilities in order to thus make profitable trading strategies.